

Please review the Institute for Digital Transformation (referred to as “The Institute”) latest Author’s Guide for detailed information on: Audiences, Targeted Topics, and Brand Message & Voice. Your article cannot include any references or links to commercial websites. You are encouraged to provide references or citations to studies or expert opinions. Your article should also include a short (1 or 2 paragraphs) biography about yourself. (And optionally a photo and links to your social media accounts.)

I give permission for the Institute for Digital Transformation, LLC (The Institute) to publish my content in any format, such as the Journal of Digital Transformation, and in translations.

Title of content:

Names of all authors:

All authors must complete and sign a copy of this form

When the content is published, I give The Institute copyright ownership rights to this content. This means that it cannot be published elsewhere without the permission of The Institute.

I also give The Institute permission to distribute or sell this content in any format in the future, including print and electronic text in any format (such as broadcast, cablecast, laserdisc, multimedia or any other existing or future media format), through on-line digital archives such as the Journal of Digital Transformation, and in translations.

I agree to protect The Institute (including employees, directors, and officers) from any costs from any claims that this content infringes any copyright, trademark, trade secret, letters of patent, or other intellectual property rights, and will defend any claims at my own expense.

Author’s rights

I understand that all authors of this content keep the following rights:

- Authors keep all other proprietary rights to the work, such as patent.
- Authors may re-use any portion of the content in future works, including books, lectures and presentations in all media, provided that The Institute is credited with the original publication.
- Authors may revise the work. If it is sufficiently different, it is considered a new work, but still should cite the original as published in The Institute publication.
- Authors may post the final version of the content on their own web site or that of their employer, for noncommercial access and personal use by others. This version of the content must include this notice:

"© Reprinted from Institute for Digital Transformation {insert URL} “

Third party material

If this content contains the work of anyone other than the authors, I understand that it is my responsibility to secure any necessary permissions or licenses and to pay any associated fees. If credit or a citation to a copyrighted work is required, I have obtained the correct wording for such a citation and have included it in the content manuscript.

I have not used material by anyone other than the authors.

I have permission to use the following material (such as a photo, illustration, cartoon, video, text), either because it is my own material or because I've asked the copyright owner for permission, and that I have paid all fees required to use this material:

Please list any materials by a third-party:

#	Title or Filename	Author or Copyright Owner
1.
2.
3.

Signature

Author's Full Name:

Email Address:

Phone Number:

Mailing Address:

LinkedIn:

Twitter:

Date:

Send your article and this completed form to: editor@i4dt.org